

If it gets too late will I be able to walk home? Along the murky street all by myself in a city which suffers from the greatest civic woes, anywhere one could find. I somehow crave to stare at lines of code and feel comfortable - not that I intend to write any that's best left to those who do it. There's nothing much to create after all, it's best that I stop communicating with Nick altogether. It simply is unwise - I just should refrain from accepting a meeting invite or sending one - just stop communication with, simply because there's nothing I have that's worth his time: If I really had any - I would publish it already - why beg them for feedback or money? Screw them all - that's what I'd say - go solo - go elsewhere - do something else - write code or do whatever - who has anything to say or do. I know the mornings are difficult and so are the afternoons when I am all alone - the tendency to have sex suddenly grows and I end up masturbating to porn. I don't know why I really have to do that - it makes me feel good and calm for some time but later I resort to the same lows I had before. That's why I want to do something else during that time - like write or just read and relax. I don't whether masturbation is good or bad, but if I could avoid for that one time - it somehow boosts my self esteem as if I have managed to overcome a craving of mine. There are several such cravings which are quite useless if I look at them - food, sex, validation, craving for relationship, talking to Mrs - like today I called up Priya from SBI so that I could dematerialize those SGB I have and sell them to get money out of it - the money that'll put me to work whether I earn it or spend it - using it to buy some product or service that I do not actually need. It just is boring you see. I mean the ordeals I have to simply go through - these temptations won't let me just be - the thing is if I succumb to more then I would develop a habit - a sick one actually - that only makes me crave for more - why is this such a thing - I should just stop staring or checking out women here - there's no point - I don't want to do it - just makes me feel like a creep. I don't want to check out women - I should only make eye contact and not look elsewhere - this is what is needed - please stay away - stop demeaning them through sexual objectification - don't need it -

It's quite a touchy subject - women - best if I ignore them unless there's a dire need to establish a communication, for example today when I had to ask Ashita about scanning documents and their billing - that's okay but I would refrain from saying hi and just make that small talk - needless actually. If they want to talk then it's okay, but, I should not initiate a conversation without a requirement - please do not create that requirement either.

The only thing that scares me a bit is that email from Nick, if it shows up in my inbox - discarding it might be a challenge. Not sure how to go there. I just need to put it my head that such conversations are utterly possible - whether I like it or not - please refrain, please refrain from talking, sending emails - listen to what's necessary like that protagonist from 3-Iron movie I saw yesterday - just listen and do things accordingly - there's no need to talk to anybody or saying anything. Just write all of it here and do the ceremony - that's all there is to it - write, follow the ceremony and throw away the pages.

By the tomorrow morning I could come here early as they would be serving breakfast, perhaps the first thing I do in the morning when I wake up - get a bath, carry that laptop in that bag tomorrow and have the breakfast - the only challenge is this that of going back home - now that's difficult in that hot sun and dusty air. Get those shoes off the balcony - it might've dried up by now - use them for tomorrow's visit - perhaps come during the evening - that's more comfortable - anytime else is just not possible - sun and then rain - disaster I must say. I chose the wrong month's I guess - not really the best of weathers or the air quality. I guess I have to adapt to this air quality after all - believe that I can handle it - it's all fine. So, don't come here tomorrow morning for that Idli Vada, instead stay at home - they'll probably have a good breakfast ready that's even more tastier - enjoy that, along with the lunch and get a nap. When the suns begin to set, come here for a walk, have tea or coffee and just scribble whatever that's on your mind. That should be okay I guess.