

Still matrix-hobbit is facing the access token error that needs to be resolved.
I have to get that and after that the rest - it seems like a lot of work.
I feel desperate now as this is becoming tiresome - for some reason I feel like spending that cash, as if I do not need it anymore. I am forgetting the stuff I still need to pick up from here. I can't think of any more printouts that I would have to carry around. I just feel like putting my car at D's place, in that parking spot that he has but I'm not sure whether it would be of any use - I'd still have to walk all the way there to get the car. Perhaps, now I could just drive there and put it there, if it's vacant.

The problem at home is this that it won't be easy to move around.

The drawback is this that I would have to clean his snowwheeler in that process. Still it would be a walk all the time if I were to go there and start the engine → quite useless I must say.

I have initiated that backup now - it should finish in an hour or so, if everything goes well. The temperatures must be low enough to prevent it from overheating.

All the things that I think I need get they all are quite useless now. What's the point of going on wanting them all the way?
Rubbish as it seems, pointless as it seems keep eating me from within. Is this working really that therapeutic I wonder - just because words flow on to this surface will it prepare me for the worst that's going to happen? I have no idea.

Worst - it's always the worst that I could possibly think of.

It's already seven days - a week - since I mailed that invoice - it seems all that money I expected will not be there after all.

I guess my only option is to become a hikikomori and stay within the confines of my room - all this energy, enthusiasm is proving to be toxic, mostly detrimental to my being. I come here so that I could check out women - what a tragedy. Only if I could carry myself better - all those papers that need to be printed - yet remain unprinted - I need to create them and have them all → try David Benatar's book, put two pages on one side and make it back to back long edge / short edge not sure which one. Get that book, it will read on the paper and not on a Kindle.