

5 Saturday May 2025

Friday I was considering deploying Radarr + Jackett + qBittorrent on the Linode cloud, so that I could offer them as a service to anyone who wants it. To offer entertainment services on my platform: of course no streaming but more of a database that supports all the services like IMDb -- etc. I am just wondering what are those works of mine ~~for~~ for which a lifetime too isn't sufficient. What are those works after all: programming electronics, gaming achievements, movies watched, series watched, communications with other folks, writing these articles, or simply put them as writings: - What is that work that still remains despite spending a lifetime? Turning computers on and off - walking, breathing, is my life itself a work within itself. What is the compounding work everytime I see something that's to be worked upon? Is there enough fodder for any of those? I have not replied to Christy the counsellor, as I don't find her services useful anymore - moreover there's no money left with me to pay for them. ~~Is that all to~~ All that I wish should ~~be~~ they be treated as holy grail? What value does that any way add to? I just felt like walking after the bath and breakfast, so I stepped outside and walked a kilometer in the morning sun to reach here - the sun is shing high and there's no way I could possibly last all the evening in here without food. I would be tempted to go out after some time either to feed myself or to start tinkering with code again, preparing for the demo and so on. — Or probably to watch a movie or simply to get a nap. Why is that when I look at blank paper, I do not have anything to write? Why should I just be quiet, 'do no work' or simply sit? When there's so much activity happening around — people going into work, talking, doing things, figuring out ways for some or the other, or whatever that they have to do.

I wish I had a cat as pet around, just would watch most of it as the day goes on and simply sit doing nothing. That's what I here for: to do nothing — an antithesis to work itself the idea ~~being~~ behind which this coworking space is built and operated. Lazy, be lazy, you still and still like to respond to emails, don't you? You replied to Nick's and did ask about the invoice, didn't you? Now they've put up a meeting which I refuse to participate in. I am a profligate, in whichever way I could, I possibly try to do that — different story that I fail too often.
