

When there is all but nothing, there is nothing but all, to be the petty when there's rebellion, to wane away without a trace, to die without a history, to go on without a hope, ultimate surrender to that's beyond the domain of existence, in a complete surrender to universe feeling helpless, tired, shocked and disparaged from the enormous meaningless of the prevailing eternity, I die ~~for~~ forever - sit forever - to do nothing forever. Every word has an end in itself, an end of itself, arising to be thwarted by a negation. Easier negation done than actually felt in reality.

Sip that Kashmiri Kahwa tea with piping water and sugar while Kashmir plagues with bloodshed, war and violence. War seems to be the mood of the subcontinent whereas I die everyday without a trace of life, I just wait for becoming that parasite that ~~for~~ feed on that host to kill it eventually. I am nothing but a parasite, I should not try to hide that identity of mine. I somehow enjoy going solo, killing myself without equipment, without any devices, as if these words are more than sufficient to do and engage and live with, eternally.

Here are few authors whose works I read or would want to read and summarize:- Tolstoy, Nietzsche, Dostoyevski, Schopenhauer, Spinoza, Marx, Sartre, Camus, Zepffe, Cioran, Russell Bertrand, Rand Ayn, Adam Smith, Malthus, Slavoj Zizek, Noam Chomsky, & for starters. Can I recollect few works of the above authors? Let's try:-

↳ Tolstoy - War and Peace, Anna Karenina

Friedrich Nietzsche - Beyond good and Evil, Thus Spoke Zarathustra, Will to power.

↳ Fyodor Dostoyevsky - Brothers Karamazov, The Idiot, Crime and punishment

Arthur Schopenhauer - world as will and representation.

Spinoza - ?

Karl Marx - Communist Manifesto, Das Kapital

Peter Wenzel Zepffe -

Emil Cioran - Trouble with being born, Heights of despair

Bertrand Russell - ?

Ayn Rand - Fountainhead, Atlas Shrugged

Adam Smith - Wealth of Nations.

Malthus - Population theory

Slavoj Zizek - Critique of ideology, Parallax view

Noam Chomsky - Requiem for an American dream, Capitalism

I also would like to study following books and make notes:-

- 1) Magic Garden Explained:- Unix SVR4 - Goodheart
- 2) The Art of Computer Programming - all volumes - Donald Knuth.
- 3) Origin of Species - Charles Darwin
- 4) Algorithm Design Manual - Steven Skiena
- 5) ~~see~~ Abstract Algebra J.W. Hertenstein
- 6) Graph Theory - Kenneth Rosen
- 7) Discrete mathematics - M.H. Karhel, Baker.
- 8) Computer Architecture :- Carl Hamacher
- 9) Digital Design : Morris Mano
- 10) Database Systems - Ramakrishnan, Gehrke
- 11) Operating system design - Silberschatz, Galvin
- 12) Linear Algebra - Stroud. K.A
- 13) Advanced Engineering mathematics - Kreyszig

Sometimes, I just wonder, to read physical copies of these books, I might just need access to a library, where I could go and read books and make notes all day long. I don't quite like the digital books on a computer or an ebook reader - they don't feel tangible. My desire to read from paperbacks and pages is uncompromisable.

I will forever try to summarize the books that I read - here are few that I could write a concise summary about after reading :-

- 1) Better to never have been by David Benatar
- 2) Trouble with being born by Emil Cioran
- 3) Thus Spoke Zarathustra by Friedrich Nietzsche
- 4) Book of Disquiet by Fernando Pessoa
- 5) World as will and representation by Arthur Schopenhauer
- 6) Being and Nothingness by Jean Paul Sartre
- 7) ~~Stoic~~ Meditations by Marcus Aurelius

I am reminded of that biopic of Srinivasa Ramanyam where in paper and pen in themselves were a luxury for him offered by the ~~the~~ establishment to write. For some reason, I do not seem to value this paper and the pen that I use, it feels like as if, or as long as something is not digitized, it does not qualify to be valued as information. I forget of the fact that these cannot be created on paper.
