

The sleep beckons as I write slowly. The words need to go still. Yesterday's fucking was good. after all - I was unable to sleep later - somehow, money as a thing constantly bothers me - on one hand it enables me to enjoy luxuries and on another makes me toil for things I can't easily do, why do you bother me, so much? I go ahead with some of the mundane choices that find me elusive - to see the work fall apart monetarily, to see to not being funded anymore, makes me sad and hurt.

It makes me feel desperate, wanting and restless - I try to relax yet I find myself amidst work - it has been a long journey to break into. Somehow the idea that, I will succeed somehow is highly unlikely.

I wait again, I think those PayPal folks are deliberately going to make this payment longer - push it to another three or four days. I don't trust ~~too~~ what they say, even one bit.

Why do I feel like another douche? I feel like splurging, spending it all away - whatever that I've got and go broke.

Maybe I should write to Niels and explain whatever has been done so far - give him a demo or something like that.

Let me go and get the open project mod in and see that ~~off~~ it works - try to make that work - I can do that after all.
